«ANTI-CORRUPTION MANAGEMENT SYSTEM.
OVERVIEW OF ISO 37001 REQUIREMENTS»

The publication of the international standard ISO 37001 in October 2016 formalised the trend towards controlling anti-corruption activities worldwide. Like other international standards, ISO 37001:2016 «Anti-Corruption Management Systems» contains global best practices for anti-bribery. Its specificity is to unify the concept of bribery in order to reduce possible risks and strengthen anti-corruption controls. ISO 37001 is applicable to organizations of all sizes and forms of ownership and is structured similarly to, for example, ISO 9001. It has a low implementation cost and is easily integrated with QMS, etc.

The overview course on this topic includes an explanation of the requirements of the standard itself and is supported by the Kazakh legal and regulatory framework for anti-bribery and corruption:

- The concept of corruption and standards for anti-corruption activities;
- The basics of building an anti-corruption system;
- development of anti-corruption policies and appointment of responsible persons;
- the context of organisation and objectives of anti-corruption management;
- risk assessment;
- rules of conduct of employees within the anti-corruption system.

This 1-day training is conducted online as a webinar.
